Modern Languages

On Tuesday 1st March a past pupil of the school, Stephen Turkington (who now works as a translator for the European Commission) returned to talk to pupils in Year 12 and Year 10 about his job as a translator and about the various career options with languages within the European Commission. He then hosted a German translation workshop for the AS and A2 German pupils, who were joined by the A2 pupils from Lurgan College and Portadown College, along with their teachers Mr Buttery and Mr Andrews.

Finally, he chatted informally at lunchtime to the AS pupils who study the three languages, informing them of his own career path so far and answering their questions. It was a very enjoyable day for both staff and pupils and we hope to see him back in school soon.
